GMG FORUMS: Where Mining Moves Forward

Not another conference. A catalyst for change.

GMG Forums aren't built around presentations — they're built around progress. Each Forum brings together mining companies, suppliers, researchers, and innovators who are actively shaping the industry's future. This is where barriers come down, competitors collaborate, and real solutions take form.

In every region, GMG Forums are designed to spark action — identifying the biggest challenges, defining where collaboration is needed, and connecting the right people to move projects forward.

GMG Forums are not just industry gatherings — they are working sessions for the industry's collective future.

Sponsor a 2026 GMG Forum and be part of defining what's next.

Why they matter

The mining industry is under pressure to deliver more — responsibly, efficiently, and transparently — while navigating technology shifts, workforce change, and new expectations from society. Innovation is happening everywhere, but too often in isolation.

GMG Forums bridge that gap. They are where industry alignment happens — where ideas from across the ecosystem are connected, refined, and turned into the collaborative projects, guidelines, and pilots that move the sector forward.

Who should be there

Executives, innovators, and practitioners who want to do more than watch the future unfold — they want to build it. The Forums connect:

- Mining company leaders driving operational change
- Technology partners seeking alignment and collaboration
- Researchers and innovators bridging insight to impact
- Policy, ESG, and workforce leaders shaping the conditions for transformation

How our Forums are different

- No sales pitches.
- No silos.
- No media.
- Co-creation, not presentation
- Global reach, local impact.
- Outcomes that stick.
